

Wayne Kramer first got involved in carriage driving in the early 1980s when he lived in Florida. After relocating to Nebraska in 1985, Wayne actively competed in combined driving and pleasure driving, both singles and pairs, throughout the Midwest. While no longer competing, Wayne has remained active in the sport as an official, organizer, course designer and volunteer.

In the 1990s and up to 2004, Wayne served on the Board of Directors of the American Driving Society (ADS). He held positions as Regional Representative, chairman of the Licensed Officials committee and 2 terms as Vice President. He has been an ADS Licensed Official (Combined Driving TD) since the late 1980s.

Professionally, Wayne is a medical entomologist and has worked primarily in state government and university positions the last 30 years. He retired from his most recent position as a professor in the Entomology Dept. at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Wayne is enjoying retirement in the Central Arizona mountains in Prescott, AZ after relocating to the area in 2017.
